Focusing on
The American Wing at 100 Years Old

March 27, 2025

The Met is a museum representing many different cultures, going across centuries and regions of the world. Yet, it would not be complete without the history and the story of America itself.

In the past 100 years, American culture has changed and evolved. The newly imagined American Wing of the Met is designed to mirror what is really happening in our society, addressing ongoing debates about who is American, what is American identity, and what place America holds in today's world with the hope of allowing a better understanding of how we got to where we are today.

We will travel through the three floors of the American Wing with a knowledgeable docent and then be left to explore on our own.
